

Seven Women Who Do Unusual Jobs---And Get Away With Them

MRS. M. J. RAGAN
KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 9—Law's the thing for women, says Mrs. M. J. Ragan, and it's never too late to begin. She got her diploma in the presence of her two grandchildren. Mrs. Ragan, who is a prominent club and social worker, will open her law office in the fall.

MISS L. E. TRICKEY
CHEYENNE, Wyo., July 9—The worse they buck, the better Miss Lorena Trickey likes to ride 'em. No wonder—she's the world's champion horsewoman. She won the title at the Cheyenne Frontier Days celebration against the best women riders of the west. Miss Trickey used to punch cattle.

MRS. L. E. BAKER
KANSAS CITY, July 9—Getting women and girls out of jail is Mrs. Louie E. Baker's vocation. She found she could be of more service that way than in general welfare work. She investigates cases, and if the women are worthy, she goes on their bond. She's proud of having saved so many unfortunate girls.

MRS. S. R. LEWIS
TUSCALOOSA, Ala., July 9—Can you bake a pie? That's what made Mrs. S. R. Lewis famous for miles around. When she wanted to send one of her daughters to a conservatory of music, and didn't have the necessary money, Mrs. Lewis raised it by making pies.

MRS. ELIZABETH LINGENFELTER
KANSAS CITY, July 9—Mrs. Elizabeth Lingenfelter is pioneering in a job as "student counselor." Her work is to solve problems, other than those of learning, which confront boys and girls in school here. Flappers, the too studious, the too popular, the unpopular and the discouraged seek her advice.

MISS MABEL CODY
TAMPA, Fla., July 9—Aviation is a nice vocation for girls. Take it on the word of Miss Mabel Cody, aviator. Miss Cody does wing walking and parachute dropping, and says she is going to try the stunt of changing planes in mid-air. She is a niece of Colonel Cody, who was better known as "Buffalo Bill."

MISS NAN BAILEY
BATON ROUGE, July 9—Girls, how would you like to be an auto mechanic? Miss Nan Bailey works at it. She was the first girl to take the course at the Louisiana state university. She knows all about the technical end of an engine, and can take one apart and put it together again in a jiffy.

THE YOUNG LADY ACROSS THE WAY
The young lady across the way says the Dempsey-Carpenter match is scheduled to last 12 innings and she supposes they'll have plenty of good substitutes handy in case either should be knocked out of the box before it's over.

The Girl Next Door says many pictures of health are hand painted. Swans have been known to live 200 years.

YESTERDAY

DEPRESSION IN STOCKS

TODAY

When the South Platte river was a raging torrent recently with all bridges washed away, a woman lay dying for lack of medical attention two miles from a physician on the opposite side of the river. When all hope seemed gone the doctor remembered that the postmaster general had "humanized" his department. He secured a mail plane and made the trip, receiving the authority afterward.

The navy department has asked for sealed bids on a piano from the president's yacht, Mayflower. So many offers have been made for the old instrument by hunters of historical curiosity that this procedure was necessary to give everybody a chance. A new concert grand is replacing the old one.

A comet and 10,000 predictions of the end of the world are due June 27.
